Some of the teams prefer using white text and gray backgrounds while other teams have preferred colors and gray. If it's possible, is there a way to store all of the colors/gray values and simply apply them to a list of things, or have the properties changed as the list changes? This would be very handy for things like view mode, date format, and the like. A: Use the WYSIWYG editor on your site page. This will bring in the current "theme" information to your page. This is a very simple way to modify your theme information on the fly. For example, if your theme name is Blogger, go to your blog page and click the "WYSIWYG" button at the top right of the page. Dead Sea Products and Services Back in the 1980's we knew about the benefits of the Dead Sea. Living in the Grand Canyon of Arizona and having the nearest water supply of any large city, we had never seen the Dead Sea, despite having read of its benefits. After having moved to the Northwest, we didn't have a need for Dead Sea products, but had a new appreciation for the benefits. For those living in the Northern Hemisphere, the Dead Sea is located in a dessert in Israel, in the southwest corner of the Arabian Peninsula. The name "Dead" refers to the sodium, magnesium, calcium, and iron concentration being the lowest in the world.: Thanks! Schwal: thanks, no problem. Btw, do you know if I need some sort of special software to use the Kinect? Hello, I am running Windows 8.1 Pro, and I have enabled a Kinect for home in my settings. I have followed some of the steps outlined by James Marchman on this thread: I have a Toshiba Thrive 2 with the RT driver installed. The VGA connector is plugged in. When I test the Kinect, I get the following message: "Your device's sensor is not connected properly." How can I fix this? Is there any difference in using the HD3000 driver or the RT driver? Are there any incompatibilities 82157476af
